WALTER P. HOWELL, Editor.
DALLONIA, GA., AUGUST 17, 1877.
Our Interests.

Now that we are to have a planning mill, let some of our enterprising capitalists come out from underneath the cob-webs and dust, and make preparations for the erection of a number of pretty cottages and tenant houses this fall. There are many families within the State who desire to come among us to reap the benefits of our noble institution of learning, if neat and comfortable houses could be procured. The prospect for a large number of students the coming fall are overwhelmingly bright. The President is in daily receipt of applications for admittance. Many of our largest boarding houses are already filled to their utmost capacity with engagements, and still applications for board is being daily received. The prosperity of the school and welfare of our growing community, demand that provisions be made for the entertainment of all who desire lodging among us. It is plainly perceptible to every thinking mind that investments in real estate, under such circumstances as these must necessarily be safe and prudent, and result to the interest of the property holder. The erection of houses in Dahlonia for others, will bring population, enterprise, growth and wealth. Will not some enterprising capitalist who repeat, put the ball in motion.

We find this item in the Consolidation: Last Monday evening Mr. John F. Shecut, who lives near Madison, in Morgan county, lost his daughter, Miss Ella Shecut, in a mysterious way. She went for the cow late in the evening and has not been seen by any of the family since. Search has been made all over the county, and no clue can be obtained. The young girl is about fourteen years of age, light hair, well grown for her age. The strange part about the matter is, that no trace can be made of her at all. Mr. Shecut came to the city yesterday to procure the services of Detective Murphy, and will return and renew the search. It is thought that it is possible that the girl has been abducted by some parties in the country, but this is mere inference.

There is one good trait in the character of the Western Indians. They never strike for higher wages, and when the troops turn out on Joseph's band has never refused to play. It is true the Indians have preferences. They stipulate for Government agents who will not cut blankets in two, and demand a fair article of commissary whisky, with certain reservations; but no over-disorganizes labor. He lets it severe ly alone.

A workman's convention was recently held in Galveston, Texas, and the resolution adopted looked to the regulation of every labor market by Congress. "We will petition that body," declares that resolution, "to pass a law making it a penal offense of any corporation or firm to advertise for men, either laborers or mechanics, when the supply is equal to the demand in their own localities."

The new paper to be started at Milledgeville will be named it is said, "The Old Capital," and will be engineered by H. W. J. Ham, of the Warrenton Clipper, and Colonel E. P. Speer, formerly of the Griffin News. This shows that the capital question has assumed such proportions in Atlanta as to warrant Ham & Speer starting another Arctic expedition. —San. News.

A case of sunstroke occurred in Sumter county on last Monday. Mr. Eugene Byrd, who was engaged on his father's farm in saving fodder, was sun-stricken about noon. He managed to walk home, a distance of half a mile, and though very much prostrated will probably recover from the effects of the stroke.

In Oregon a man has to take out a license, which costs him $5 a year, permitting saloon keepers and others to sell him drinks. And when a man's wife takes away his license in the morning and hides it, he has to go dry as a bone all day.

The Turko-Russian War.

There is not a reader of common understanding who does not perceive that affairs in Europe in relation to the Turko-Russian war, has assumed gigantic proportions, and all Europe is in an unsettled condition. Great Britain seems to be most directly interested, and is in better condition for a long protracted war than any power in Europe, and Russia has to use her utmost care to prevent Great Britain from interfering, as she is jealous of Russia acquiring too much territory, and controlling the Baltic as key to the Indies. This vast but late growth of importance calls for all of Russia's caution not to infringe upon England's rights or territory, which Great Britain will be sure to resent; or otherwise the smallest negligence upon her part might prove fatal to her allies. Russia seems to interest herself mostly against Turkey—has poured her armies into her dominion, and like locusts are devouring the fruits of the earth. Notwithstanding this it is visible that Russia's councils at home are irresolute, from the backwardness of their armies. To what is this backwardness owing, but Russia's dread of Great Britain, who has maritime force enough at her command to reduce Russia in a short while to the condition of Mexico. It is proof against all the combined force of the North, and yet the ablest counselors of his czar's majesty, are sensible that a squadron of British men of war, acting in earnest, could reduce them to the same unimportant state they were in before Peter the Great took the reins of Government into his own hands. Populous as the dominions of his czar's majesty are, he is not able to march and maintain a hundred thousand men for three months out of his own dominions, for they must either subsist upon subsidies, or by putting the country where they are, be his friends or enemies, under contribution. Almost the same may be said of Turkey. But with all the poverty of the Turks they have the misfortune to be governed by a religious faction which teaches them to respect no powers, and are insensible to consequences, and seem to follow no dictates, but those of blind revenge and despair. The Mussulmen of India are in sympathy with the Turks. This may lead England to take advantage of the division between Russia and Turkey. In what condition then would these Governments be should the great maritime power of the world, take advantage of the division between these countries, humble them and force them to act a part that is directly the reverse of their interest, inclination and honor?

BIRDS OF NORTH GEORGIA.

FAMILY CUCULIDAE—CUCKOOS.

Head without crest; bill about as long as the head, decurved and slender; tail feathers, ten in number, graduated; wings long reaching about the middle of the tail; tarsi very short.

COCYZUS AMERICANUS—THE YELLOW-BILLED CUCKOO.

Upper mandible, black; lower yellow; upper parts of a greenish olive slightly tinged with ash towards the bill, beneath white; iris brown.

These birds are plentiful in this section as a summer visitor. The yellow-billed Cuckoo arrives here about the last week in April. His flight is rapid, consisting of repeated strokes of his wings. Occasionally he pauses in his flight and descends to a bush and alights, as if an enemy was after him. After repeating his song—

"Krow, krow, krow, krow krow; kru, kru, kru kru, kru kru," he is off again, and soon vanishes from sight. When mated they commence to build very soon after, placing the nest on a low limb or small shrub. It is composed of sticks, and twigs and sometimes lined with moss. The eggs are usually three in number; seldom more; but sometimes four; they are of a light greenish blue color. In my rambles this summer I found eight nests of this bird, and the eggs differ in size, in one nest of three eggs, measuring 1.17 by 1.10, nearly round, in another of two eggs, measured .94 by .68, I believe the smallest I have ever seen. Two broods are reared in the season.

A Trip in the Country and How it was Almost Frustrated—A Series of Incidents.

Tuesday morning at an early hour we procured a steed of the milne-decent, and wended our way towards the rural precincts of the county, to visit a friend, who is engaged in the pleasant occupation of teaching the "young ideas how to shoot." We were scarcely able to receive any elucidation of the intricacies of the way, and were compelled to rely upon our good, or evil, fortune in reaching our destination. All went well for awhile, but as we receded from Dahlonia our way became more obtuse, and to add to our discomfiture, we were compelled to seek guidance at every residence, to prevent our being lost in the wending route. At length, as fate would have it, we took the wrong road, and proceeded a considerable distance before discovering our mistake. We had gone too far in the wrong to retrace our steps, but a kind gentleman appeared soon, who guided our erring selves through many labyrinth of woods. We were informed by this gentleman that we were as far from our destination now, as we were in Dahlonia. Exasperated by our misfortune, we almost gave up the design of visiting our friend, but resolved that we would not be thwarted in this manner. Having become wearied with our ineffectual wanderings, we halted awhile in a beautiful grove to recuperate our former vigor. The restlessness of our steed soon became apparent and we ran to extricate him from his harassing position, but immediately repented of our folly. It seemed as if we were destined to encounter the most undesirable mishaps in this, the first visit to our friend. Evil fate had decreed for us to hitch the mule among a nest of yellow jackets. So we were literally covered with the pestiferous insects, who attacked us with the most unabated fury. Terribly frightened by this sudden onslaught, we betook ourselves to flight, dashing aside our upper garments in confusion, hoping thus to extricate ourselves from the foe. But we were attack d with renewed energy by the almost invincible horde. After fleeing for a considerable distance before the pursuing enemy, we became more valiant, and resolved to withstand them, as it was impossible to get rid of them by flight. Seizing a brush, we whirled it around in our fury, and laid the innumerable host of jackets in the dust, the victims of our revengeful nature. We left the bodies of the slain weltering on the field, and wended our way back, though stealthily, to the place of our former route, to find ourselves in a most pleasurable condition. Teeming millions of jackets where hovering over the garments which we had cast aside in our flight and we knew our incapacity of comporting with such a numerous and valiant band.

The mule was nowhere in sight, and we thought that, when we recovered our garments, we would be compelled to trudge our way homeward on foot. We cast our weary limbs on the ground, and bemoaned our sad fate as did father Ananias and the brave Trojans on the shores of Libya. We remained in this posture nearly an hour and still the fury of the horde did not abate; they hovered over the defenseless garments as if an indefatigable foe was concealed therein. They must be attacked if the garments were ever obtained; y we were averse to do this but nevertheless it must be done. In our efforts to render ourselves as impregnable as possible we came upon a huge serpent resembling in size some immense boa-constrictor or unconquerable anaconda. So disconcerted were we, by this monster that our fort was submerged in the waters of a peaceful stream that meandered through the dark and shadowy wood. After equipping ourselves as well as possible, we braved an assault upon the swarms of jackets and completely routed them, so sudden and unexpected was the attack that not even one deigned to pursue us, as we almost flew through the leafy grove. Presently we met our kind old friend, Uncle Archie Wimpy, who directed our erring selves to the place of our destination, where we arrived at ten o'clock, after five hours of weary travel, which should have been completed in two. The young gentleman, (Mr. T. A. Evans) has a promising school of fifty pupils, all of which he holds in complete control by his rigidity and knowledge of government. In the evening we repaired to the residence of Mr. Tom Lilly, a genial and hospitable gentleman, where we spent an agreeable night. His excellent lady kindly ministered to the wounds which we had received in the battle with jackets. We returned to D. next morning, favorably impressed with our visit notwithstanding the encumbrance we had met with.

Dahlonia District Conference.

The second session of the Dahlonia District Conference convened at Ellijay, Ga., on the 2d day of August, 1877; Elder J. W. Stipe, presiding. Rev. J. D. Hammond was elected secretary, and Rev. H. M. Quillian assistant secretary.

For want of space we omit the names of the delegates, except the preachers in charge, or local preachers in their absence, which is as follows:

Dahlonia—Rev. J. D. Hammond, Porter Springs—Rev. E. H. Wood, Dawsonville—J. N. Myers, Cleveland—J. H. Ellis, Nacoochee—J. J. Methvin, local, Blairsville—C. S. Pattillo, Morganton—W. H. Speer, Jasper—G. T. King, local, Amicalola—H. M. Quillian, Hixwasse—G. C. Andrews.

The time for convening was fixed at 8 o'clock a.m., and 3 o'clock p.m., and adjournment at 10 o'clock a.m., and 5 o'clock p.m.

The conference elected the following delegates and alternates to meet with the Annual Conference in Gainesville, viz:

DELEGATES.
T. M. Hughes, Wm. Jackson, Dr. E. W. Watkins, A. G. Wimpy.

ALTERNATES.
Rev. J. J. Methvin, W. H. Simmons, John Wall, J. M. Butt.

Reports were received from the various charges which we cannot publish for want of space, all which appeared to be satisfactory to the body.

Among other resolutions the following were offered and carried:

Resolved, That the District Conference hereby tenders its thanks to the good people of Ellijay for the generous hospitality with which they have entertained the members and delegates of the conference.

Divine services were commenced on Wednesday night, the 1st inst.; preaching by Rev. J. D. Hammond; preaching Thursday 11 o'clock a.m., by Rev. J. J. Methvin; at 3 o'clock p.m., by Rev. J. N. Myers; at 7 p.m., by Rev. W. H. Speer. Friday, 11 o'clock a.m., by Rev. W. P. Lane, at 7 o'clock p.m., by Rev. C. S. Pattillo, Saturday, 11 o'clock a.m., by Bishop Pierce, Saturday, 7 o'clock p.m., Hon. H. P. Bell, Sabbath, 9 o'clock a.m., love-feast, conducted by Elder J. W. Stipe; at 11 o'clock a.m., preaching by Bishop Pierce; at 3 o'clock p.m., Sunday school exercises and lectures by J. D. Hammond, H. P. Bell and Bishop Pierce; at 7 o'clock p.m., preaching by Rev. J. D. Hammond, and concluded by Rev. W. P. Lane. The attendance was large and the conduct of the people uniformly good. Quite a number of excellent sermons were preached, and we hope much good has been done.

The occasion was one of importance, and we believe the highest expectations of the public have been realized.

We wish the delegates, members and visitors a safe return to their homes and a prosperous career in life.

We hope that the seed sown here may bring forth good fruit many days hence.—Ellijay Courier.

The Postmaster General has issued a card, to be posted conspicuously in postoffices, asking the public to report promptly to the Chief Special Agent, Post-Office Department, at Washington, D. Mr. Fred. May, whose little coffin and pistol affair with James Gordon Bennett is still fresh in the minds of the public, is one of the celebrities of the Branch city. May is a very handsome young man in evening dress, but when he emerges from the bathing house clad in the rag water he creates universal havoc in the breasts of the fair-looking ones. He is tall and finely proportioned, with limbs as clean cut as those of some crack racer, and an Apollo-like head, set on shoulders. He is, together, a magnificent specimen of manly beauty, and has been so apparent in his scanty garb of manna cold, with short sleeves and j gace, to create a decidedly adverse sentiment against James Gordon Bennett on the female side of our constituency. This classic featured youth, who might take his place as a model for a sculptor, is decidedly averse to the notoriety to which he is subjected, and said recently, half-joking, half-petulant, that he might as well hire himself out for exhibition at once.

Washington's New York Letter to the Baltimore Enquirer.

The New York Journal of Commerce bestows deserved praise upon the orderly and law-abiding conduct of the Southern workmen during the recent strikes. It says: "It is true that the cities of the South are not as crowded as those of the North with men who cannot get work, or tramps or dissatisfied laborers. But the real reason for the quiet of the South when all the other parts of the country were overrun by mobs was the peaceful disposition of her people. That they went through all that week of crisis and kept the peace in Richmond, Charleston, Savannah, Mobile, New Orleans, and other large cities of the South, where there were few regular or volunteer soldiers on hand to keep order, is a test proof of their willingness to obey the laws, to work for a living, and to dwell in amity with all men."

"It was at that critical moment of the battle," said a Duhague minister in an impassioned burst of eloquence last Sabbath, "when the Duke of Wellington said, 'I should say, when the Duke of Wellington—that is, when the Duke of Wellington—at the battle of Waterloo—' and then somehow the pressure appeared to be so badly managed that he didn't think it would pay to repair it, so he said, 'And severally and lastly,' and went on—Hark—"

A circuit rider one day met a man praying in the middle of the road. This exhibition of piety was not only gratifying, but aroused curiosity and boded inquiry. "What are you doing?" asked the preacher. "Praying for my enemy," said the man. "Praying for your enemy?" the astonished divine replied; "what are you doing that for?" "Don't the Bible say if you pray for your enemy you heap coals of fire on his head?" "Yes," then said the man "I want to burn this d—n rascal up."

While she sat in twilight expecting her beloved her hands were doted wistfully over the keys as she sang "Somebody's, somebody's waiting for thee." She was right. The old man with a new pair of double up-pers and a club was waiting for him behind the front door.

A political orator, speaking of a certain general whom he professed to admire, said that on the field of battle he was always found where the bullets were thickest. "Where was that?" asked one of his auditors. "In the ammunition wagon," yelled another.

Nature has written a letter of credit upon some men's faces, which is honored almost wherever presents ed.—Hacray.

Signal & Advertiser

WALTER P. HOWELL, Editor.

DALTON, GA., AUGUST 27, 1877.

The Hampton merchants claim to have shipped about twenty-five thousand pound of dried fruit this season.

If the habit of sending us half-printed sheets of the Gainesville Southron, is still persisted in, by the mailing clerk of that office we will be compelled to report him to St. Peter.

There are four thousand two hundred and fifteen voters, white and colored, in Fulton county, as also ninety-six lawyers, twenty-two doctors, and twelve dentists. Consequently there are more who live off the misfortunes of the community than off their infirmities.

Walker county is excited over an attempt to commit a horrid crime by a man named Langford upon a little girl ten years of age. The scandal on being detected stole a horse and made his escape, but was captured on Wednesday at Dalton and committed to jail.

The Barnesville Gazette propounds this conundrum: "How long before the farmers can issue an emancipation proclamation, and say they are free again?" and answers it: "If they continue making everything at home, and have a few more good fruit and other crops, the day is not far off when they can issue such a proclamation."

A speckled trout was recently caught in Duck river by Mr. W. Forbes, of Macon, which measured twenty-three inches in length, fifteen inches about the girth, and weighed six and a quarter pounds. Mr. Forbes says he was the fattest fish ever he saw; fat from his entrails would have filled a quart cup.

Last Tuesday week lightning struck the barn of Mr. Henry King, of Chattahoochee county, killing one fine mule and knocking down another. The corn cob in the horse trough caught fire from the stroke, and the barn, etc., would have been entirely consumed had it not occurred in the day time, when the danger was seen and immediately stopped by Mr. King.

The Gwinnett Herald learns that diphtheria is raging among the children in the neighborhood of Buford, in that county. There have been five cases which have terminated fatally, and other cases in the vicinity not reported. It seems to be a very malignant type of this disease, and the physicians find it difficult to afford any relief.

Lincoln county flows with honey. Mr. Daniel Mumford, who lives in the neighborhood of Salem, in that county, found and robbed a bee tree not long since, and got the largest amount of honey we ever heard of coming from one hive. The hollow of the tree that contained the honey was nine feet long and one foot in diameter, and was completely filled. It is supposed he got at least two hundred pounds.

The Athens Georgian says that quite a number of villages were broken open in that village on Monday, 20th instant, and robbed. The following amounts were stolen: S. Sagar, $75; C. W. Hood, $25 or $30; Harbor & Bro., $40 or $50; Gros & Co., $15 or $20. The burglars next broke into the post office, stole the mail keys and the official stamps, amounting to $15. There is no clue to the perpetrators. It is said that most of the money stolen was in nickels.

In the geological collection room, says the Atlanta Constitution, may be seen a large fossil turtle shell, embedded in limestone and shells and all preserved. It was recently found in the marl beds on the Chattahoochee river, about twenty miles above Fort Gaines, by the geological survey party, and is a valuable specimen of an extinct species of the present turtle. There were also found quantities of the teeth and bones of ancient sharks and other animals in the immense marl beds that are exposed all along the river south of Columbus. Specimens of gypsum, in large pieces from the same beds, are also on exhibition.

The Next General Assembly.

An exchange says: The Convention has finally determined that the next election for members of the General Assembly shall be held in December—at the same time the new Constitution is submitted to the people for ratification or rejection. The object of this measure, as explained by its advocates in the Convention, is to interest the people as much as possible in the election, and thereby cause a full vote to be polled. The members of the Legislature who are also delegates to the Convention voted for the section, and one of them, Judge Wm. M. Reese, made a handsome speech in its favor. Under this arrangement, in the event of the ratification of the Constitution, an entirely new Legislature—Senate and House of Representatives—will be chosen next December, and the Legislature as chosen will have the election of a United States Senator, in place of Gen. John B. Gordon, and of nearly all, if not all, of the Judges of the Superior Court and Solicitor General. The importance of the contest will cause great interest to be taken in it, and we have little doubt that the full vote of the State will be polled.

Toombs' $25,000.

Opponents to the work of the Constitutional Convention will no longer doubt the ability and patriotism of one of its members. Toombs is one of them. A check for $25,000 did it. The scoundrels are averse, land lords easy, washer-women happy, pawn-shops disgorged, the whole air resplendent with joy and the perfume of "red liquor" and grass juleps. We knew the old man would do it. It is like Toombs. He simply covered the ground tangibly while Governor James was discussing it on paper. That's our style. We would have done the same thing. We intended to do it if nobody else had. We were determined that Holcombe and Hamilton, and Wofford and men of that kidney should have a fair $4,000 deal.

We repeat we admire "the old man." He's a friend of the people, and of Holcombe, and Hamilton, and Wofford. They shall have their pay, and if Josh Hill don't disappoint us he will mortgage that Washington estate and settle with the pages and water closets.—The Old Capital.

A new era in the Piano trade has been inaugurated by the MEXELSON PIANO CO., No. 56 Broadway N. Y., whose advertisement appears elsewhere. This Company is regularly incorporated under the Laws of the State of New York, and composed of eminent Piano manufacturers, with the express object of selling Pianos direct to the people at Factory Prices without the intervention of agents or dealers.

These Pianos made one of the finest displays at the Centennial Exhibition, and were unanimously recommended for the Diploma of Honor and Medal of Merit.

This Company are the first to do a general business with the purchase direct, saving him more than one-half the price charged by others first class.

We would recommend any of our readers who have any idea of ever buying a piano, to send for their illustrated and Descriptive Catalogue, which will be mailed free to all.

An extensive fraud has been developed in Coweta county and some excellent prevail, it being the discovery of a plot to raise money by means of counterfeit jury certificates in which a former Clerk of the Superior Court named John H. Mann seems to have been the leading character. His plan was to get the blank certificates, forge the name of the jurymen and also the attestation of the Clerk of the Superior Court, and then sell the same at a discount. Several of the citizens have been thus victimized. On the discovery of the plot, Mann fled the county and has not yet turned up. The county will not suffer by these certificates in circulation, as the commissioners have determined that no jury scrips will hereafter be paid by the Treasurer, unless endorsed and authorized to be paid by them at their regular monthly terms.

One fifth of the land in the State of Alabama still belongs to the government.

The Convention Proceedings.

The Constitution Publishing Company will issue as soon as the Convention closes, a complete report of the Proceedings of the Convention, giving the speeches of the members on every subject that has been considered.

It is the same report revised and corrected heretofore published in each issue of The Atlanta Daily Constitution. It is the only stenographic report of the proceedings published, and therefore the only report that gives in full the debates of the Convention. It has been prepared at great expense to the Company and will make a book of more than 500 pages. It will be neatly printed, and will contain nothing but the proceedings of the Convention. The price will be $1.00 per copy.

Only a limited number of copies have been published, and many orders have already been received. All who desire a copy will please send the amount by registered letter or postoffice order, and the book will be forwarded post paid.

Naval Cadets of the Ninth District.

A competitive examination of candidates for appointment to the Naval Academy, for the Ninth Congressional District, will be held in the city of Gainesville, on Saturday, September 1st, 1877. Dr. H. S. Bradley, Prof. J. W. Glenn, Prof. E. H. Beck, President C. B. LaHatte and Henry Perry, Esq., are appointed the Board of Examiners. Candidates must be over fourteen, and under eighteen years of age; free from physical defects; of good moral character; residents of the Ninth District, and will be required to report at the Academy for examination by the 12th of September next.

H. P. BELL.

August 20, 1877.

P. S. Papers in the Ninth will please publish the above.

Convention Sketches

The convention sketches are now ready. The volume is handsomely bound in cloth—price one dollar. Besides a sketch of each member of the convention, the book contains a portrait of President Jenkins, and the full vote of each senatorial district. It forms an excellent memorial of the convention. A limited number of copies has been printed, and orders will be filled as they come in.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for September is already to be had, and it comes fresh and lively as a bright Spring morning. It contains a large variety of choice reading matter, instructive, cheering, encouraging and amusing. Of the many titles of interesting articles, etc., we will quote—"The New York Aqueduct and its Controversies," "The Tower of London," "Stories from the Talmud," "The Christians in Turkey." The last story from the pen of Rev. J. S. C. Albright, "Home Pulpit," "A Time to Laugh," etc., etc. Each Number has 100 illustrations and 128 pages. Parties desiring to subscribe should send $3, which is one year's subscription price for the Magazine, postpaid, to FRANK LESLIE'S PUBLISHING HOUSE, 537 Pearl Street, New York. Of all Frank Leslie's many publications, this is the most valuable one, the only Sunday magazine published in America, and it certainly excels in value the Sunday magazines of the Old Country. When it first appeared its merits were at once recognized and gained for it universal approval and a very large circulation, which has continued to increase. We congratulate Mr. Leslie on his happy and timely enterprise, and we venture to promise him a continued and immense success with our American Sunday Magazine.

It is hardly possible to form an idea of the ravages of the famine in India. The loss of life is placed at 800, and instead of decreasing, the suffering promises to increase in intensity. An appeal is to be made to the people of England and Ireland.

Adjourned Sine Die.

At length, after thirty-eight days of continuous and arduous labor, the Constitutional Convention of Georgia, which embodied much of the genius, statesmanship and wisdom of the commonwealth has completed its task, and returned to the bosom of the constituencies they were chosen to represent. We have received an advance copy of the New Constitution, full, however of interpolations and corrections, which we design, at the earliest moment practicable, to present in perfect shape to our readers.

It will require time and study to analyze and properly interpret all of its provisions; but from the previous journal, of daily proceedings, and a cursory glance at the instrument as a whole, with very few exceptions, we are prepared to endorse the document, and consider it the best, most comprehensive and judicious compendium of fundamental law ever presented to this or any other State in the Union. So greatly do the wise and salutary provisions rank and overbalance the defects, that this not probable, outside of the railroad interests and certain personal influences, that any very serious opposition can be arrayed against its ratification by the people.

Now, let us push on the work of ratification, and sacrifice all private and selfish aims upon the altar of our country.—Macon Telegraph.

Domestic Incidents.

An exchange says an esteemed lady acquaintance in the city contributes the following: A hen belonging to a flock of fowls made for herself a nest under a house where it was impossible to approach, and for a season of seven months she covered her eggs in the vain hope of producing a brood of chicks. No effort was spared to rescue the expectant fowl whenever she appeared for food and water, but eluding her would-be captors she returned to her task. At the end of the time named she became so weakened by her constant vigil that she was one day captured and placed in a coop, where food and drink was administered—in vain, however, as death shortly ensued.

A little girl in the western suburb owned a pet kitten, "Russia," by name. During last week the pet suddenly died, and was laid out with due ceremony to await burial next day. Upon visiting the remains the following day the child was horrified upon examination to find a living snake protruding from kitty's mouth. Pet had, no doubt, swallowed the reptile and paid the penalty with her life.

The New York Journal of Commerce finds comfort in what it prints as a fact, that "all through the north and west, and in many parts of the south, the people are opposed to subsidies of every description, and a strong combination will be made to upset any candidate for the speakership who rests his hopes on the championship of subsidies alone. If such a man should be elected to that high office, it does not follow that the Texas Pacific and other lebbies would be any nearer the fruition of their dreams. The mutual jealousy of these schemers is of itself a good protection against them." We shall see.

The Hawkinsville Dispatch relates the following touching incident:

Two little girls, aged seven years and two children of Mr. James Jones, of this county—died, one on Sunday, 12th inst., and the other on Monday following. The history of these precious little girls has been a singular one. Ever since their birth, when one was attacked with sickness the other would have a similar attack. When one died the other was sick, and the father said it would surely die. It lingered until Monday evening and died. On Tuesday the little twins were placed in one coffin and buried in the same grave.

There is a paragraph going the rounds in the Northern papers to the effect that Ben Hill has buried his war horse. All a mistake. Ben Hill will make a charge this fall, in Congress, that will route Blaine and his associates so completely that they will regret ever having heard of Ben Hill or his war horse.

THOUGH THE WOODPECKERS possess certain resemblance to each other and agree more or less in their habits they are so different about them that which serve readily for division into sub-groups, genera or higher groups. They may be divided into three distinct orders, which may be taken as a summary syllable, to wit: at the Pidgeon winged and acuminated and pointed tails into a sub-family Pigeons; they will constitute many separate sections. Their way may be characterized as follows:

"Pidgeon," or "Piceae." Bill more or less long; the outlines above and below nearly straight; a prominent ridge springing from the middle, or the base of a little below, and running out either on the commissure or extending parallel to and a little above it to the end; outer posterior toe longer than the anterior; the bill "Melanizing;" or "Centrae." Bill rather long; the outlines decidedly curved; outer toe nearly equal to the anterior rather longer.

"Clapnetine" or "Colapetes" difficultly curved to the acutely pointed tip; the outline rare characteristically the nostrils broadly oval, exposed anterior and the longest hairs—these are hairy woodpeckers. Dendrocincla.

Crown of the hairy woodpecker is black; a white line under and above the eye; the eye is placed in a black line; back of head scarlet; nostrils full of thick bushy hair or bristles with a bluish horn-color; straight, and about one inch and quarter long; back black, divide by a broad lateral strip of white; the feathers comprising which are loose and unwebbed, resembling hairs—whence its name; border of the wing black; wings black, tipped and spotted with white; greater wing coverts also spotted with white; tail emarginate, consisting of ten strong shafted and pointed feathers, the four middle ones black the next partially white the two exterior ones white; tail covert black; legs feet and claws light blue tongue pointed.

The nest is made by excavation in old trees in the woods.

The eggs are five in number; they are of a clear white color. They vary in size from .77 to .50 inch in length, by from .62 to .39 inch in breadth.

MALINCOLINE BERTHOUDIAE.

The Red-headed Woodpecker.

Head and neck all sand crimson red; margined by a narrow crescent of black on the part of the breast back primary quills and tail, bluish-black; upper parts generally of a bright band across the middle of the wing white; iris hazel; bill and feet dusky black.

This bird is found here all winter. About the first of May, this species pairs, and excavates a hole in a tree, in the woods, or orchard. The eggs are five in number sometimes six, and of clear-white, and marked with pinkish spots at the greater end. They vary from 1.07 to 1.11 inch in length, .78 to .84 inch in breadth.

Clapnetes Auratus. The Golden-winged Woodpecker.

Pileger: Pigeon Woodpecker.

Struts and under surfaces of wing and tail feathers gain hose yellow; a black patch on each side of the throat and stripe beneath the scapular black-brown; back and wing coverts with transverse bands of black; neck and sides ash-colored; a black streak of May's throat begins to pay court to the female.

"Their note is monotonous itself, it imitates a prolonged and joyful laugh heard at a considerable distance. Several males pursue a female, render her, and to prove their force and truth of their love, to their heads spread their tails, and move side wise backwards and forwards, performing such antics as might induce any one who witnessed them to suppose that they were desirous to join his hands to theirs. The male flies to another where he is closely followed by his mate. One even had a dozen of these gay creatures flying round him, and the suitors are now through. No fighting occurs, no jealousy seems to exist among these beaux until a male has preference is shown, and then the rejected suitors begin to search for another female.

In this manner, all the Golden-winged Woodpeckers are soon happily
